Wheaton released on bond

PENDING APPEAL: Judge allows former SIUC student found guilty of sexual assault to remain free until appeal.

JOHN LE CHIEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A former SIUC student found guilty in February of sexually assaulting a Saluki Express bus driver was released from prison on an appeal bond on Tuesday.

Marshall Wheaton, who is serving two concurrent four-year jail terms in the Illinois Department of Corrections in Springfield for sexually assaulting Barbara Reeves on March 4, 1996, was freed after posting a $500 appeal bond.

Wheaton is free until his appeal is heard by an appellate court in Mt. Vernon, which has agreed to hear his case.

Reeves was informed of Wheaton's release as soon as the appeal bond was granted.

Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wespice explained why Wheaton was released.

"He (Wheaton) had a public defender at trial. After he was convicted, his family hired a private attorney who filed a motion for an appeal bond," he said.

Wespice said appeal bonds rarely are used, and that the appeals process can be lengthy.

"The appellate court has no time limit for these cases," he said. "I don't expect this case to be decided by the appellate court for at least 12 months."

Wespice said the amount of time it takes for a case to get to the appellate court depends on when briefs are filed by both sides.

He said the circuit clerk has 63 days from the date the appellate court agrees to hear the case to file the records for the case. After the

Dean leaving, but hopes to return

I'LL BE BACK: Graduate School dean will join Educational Testing Services on July 1.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A retiring administrator says although he is leaving SIUC, he plans to return to the University in a few years because he loves interacting with students and researching with his colleagues.

John H. Yopp, associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and research and Graduate School dean, is retiring from the SIUC July 1 after 27 years of service.

"I've served longer as Graduate School dean than any previous person," Yopp said. "It's because I've had good people to work with."

Yopp, who has been Graduate School dean for 11 years, will join Educational Testing Service, in Princeton, N.J., as vice president for graduate and professional education.

Educational Testing Service is a non-profit company that develops and scores exams such as the Scholastic Aptitude Test, Graduate Record Examination and Test of English as a Foreign Language.

Yopp said he plans to return to the University as an emeritus professor in five or six years.

"I am hoping I will have the opportunity in Princeton to deal with students at the universities there," he said. "Really, the most rewarding part about the profession is working with students."

Yopp said he learned a team-oriented approach to teaching and administering early in his career while working at NASA in 1969 and 1970.

As a botany instructor, Yopp worked with as many as 12 people in his lab.

"There would be student workers, grad students, post-doctoral students and even other faculty members researching, always as a team," he said.

At NASA, Yopp researched exobotany, which is the study of plants' adaptation to extreme environmental conditions. He studied algae in harsh salt environments, such as the Dead Sea and the Great Salt Lake.

He transferred his research to a closer location when he joined the SIUC faculty in 1970.

"My first research was dealing with organisms living in the Equality (Illinois) salt spring," he said. "Some of my graduate students continued the research and

University signs new food service contract

CHANGES: Food court will feature Taco Bell, Subway, and Papa John's; Pizza Hut, Sub City will close.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A contract signed Friday between the University and an international food service company will provide food service to the SIUC Student Center for the next seven years.

Gregory Tatham, Student Center director, said the new contract is with Chartwells, a division of the Compass Group. It will operate the food court that is opening in the Student Center in fall 1997.

"I think it's a contract that creates a partnership between the University and the contractors," he said. "In the long and short term, it will benefit the students in what it offers the students."

Under the terms of the contract, Chartwells must pay SIUC 3 percent of its gross sales each year, or a minimum of $115,000 per year.

Tatham said the contract was signed Friday, but release of terms was delayed until Wednesday so the University and the new contractor could finalize paperwork.

Steve Kauf, director of the Chartwells account, said he is enthusiastic about the new contract.

"We're real excited," he said. "Compass just bought out Professional Food Management, which is used to dealing with college food service."

The cost of the $1 million Student Center renovation will be split three ways. The University will pay $500,000, Chartwells will pay $300,000, and McDonald's will pay $200,000.

Kauf said the company plans to build a Taco Bell, Subway and Papa John's Pizza, as well as its own chicken rotisserie and Chinese restaurant, in the new food court.

McDonald's will not be affected because they have an independent contract.

Kauf said Subway will be built where the Marketplace operates. He said the company also will open a coffee shop near Bowling and Billiards.

The food court will be called the Marketplace.

"I'm real excited about this, and I think the kids will be amazed," Kauf said. "It'll pretty much blow them away."

Kauf said before Compass took over, Professional Food Management would not have been able to afford the contract.

"This is a great account, high profile," he said. "It is one of our bigger accounts."

According to the Compass Group USA Web site, the company, founded in 1987, was worth $5.2 billion in 1996.

EXPERIENCE: Scuba class teaches novices how to stay afloat underwater.

SHARRIE GLATZHOFFER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Immersed in 16 feet of cool blue water, nine figures float almost effortlessly despite the weights on their belts and the heavy air tanks on their backs. Each breath they take sends a stream of crystal bubbles raining upward where they explode into circular ripples at the surface.

One of the floating figures is Mike Schlichting, a senior in aviation management and flight from Schaumburg.

Using the air regulator on his back, Schlichting bobs up and down while trying to keep from floating to the water's surface or from grazing the pool bottom with his stomach.

Schlichting is learning how to scuba dive, and he said the experience is out of this world.

"It's exceptional," said Schlichting.

"You are entering a whole new world you never imagined. Everything floats. There's no gravity. It's like going into a different world humans are alien to."

Seven students took advantage of the "Scuba Experience" class, the first introductory course of its kind, at the Student Recreation Center pool Tuesday night. The course may be offered once a month if enough interest is generated.

Joseph C. Madel, a certified scuba instructor and a senior in zoology from Glen Ellyn, has been teaching scuba diving for 10 years. Madel has been on more than 1,000 dives exploring shipwrecked vessels, ice diving and diving for buffalo skulls.

"I like to scuba dive, and I like to teach, so this is like the ultimate for me," Madel said.

Before taking the students into the deep end of the pool, Madel first gave them some basic instruction on the dynamics of scuba diving and breathing techniques.

City ends contract with Glen's Towing

CONFUSION: City underestimated number of dolly tows needed in contract.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

Because representatives of the city and Glen's Towing and Automotive have agreed to dissolve their towing contract, the Carbondale City Council on Tuesday allowed its termination.

In February, the council renewed the city's three-year towing contract with Glen's Towing and Automotive, 1806 N. Illinois Ave. The city agreed to pay only for tows that require dollies, which it estimated would cost $700 per year.

That figure is based upon the city's estimate that 20 tows per year would require dollies, for which Glen's bid $35 each. Glen's contract specifies that all other towing services would be provided for free.

Eric Crismon, co-partner of Glen's Towing, and City Manager Jeff Doherty both estimated Glen's has used the dolly 40 times since Feb. 21, when the contract period began.

Crismon estimated Glen's has towed 100 vehicles for the city in that period.

Crismon said a dolly is put under a vehicle before it is towed for several reasons. He said the safeguarding device often is used when the keys to the vehicle are not available, or if the vehicle's wheels are turned.

Using a dolly is the safest way to tow a vehicle, because a poorly maintained vehicle may slip from a conventional towing mechanism and be damaged or cause damage to other vehicles. The towing company is liable for such damages, Crismon said.

He said there has been a reason to use the dolly every time it has been used.

"We didn't say, 'Hey, let's just make money off it,'" he said. "Of course, we're going to make money off it by dolling it rather than not dolling it, but we promise people a safe tow."

One of the contract's provisions stated the city and contractor could meet if problems arose during the contract term. Doherty said such a meeting occurred in early April, and both parties agreed to end the contract.

"Based on the bid and the way it was being handled, and the understanding of the towing contractor versus the understanding of the city, it was just agreed we would terminate the contract," Doherty said.

Doherty said the city's estimation of 20 tows requiring dollies per year was based on the experience of previous years.

However, Crismon said, that estimate was inaccurate. He does not know how many vehicles Glen's towed with dollies for the city last year, because his records are not itemized that way.

"In our last contract, we dollied way more than 20 cars, but we never got paid for it," he said. "Nobody cared about it then, because there was no charge."

Further, Crismon said, the city's estimate

Student reports another case of public indecency

The most recent incident of public indecency at Campus Lake was reported Tuesday.

A 21-year-old student said that at 10:15 a.m., a man exposed himself as she walked on Campus Lake path.

The first report was made on April 23 by two people who said they saw a man masturbating near Campus Lake path between 11:30 a.m. and 12:15 p.m.

Two different people reported seeing a man masturbating at Campus Lake between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday.

The suspects from the four incidents are described as college-aged white men about six feet tall.

U.S. investigators still looking for bomb clues

Despite improved cooperation from Saudi authorities, federal investigators have still not gained access to key evidence in the bombing of an American military compound in Saudi Arabia last year and have not reached final conclusions about Iran's alleged involvement in the attack, senior FBI officials said Wednesday.

U.S. and Saudi intelligence officials have concluded that Iran was the organizing force behind the Khobar bombing. The conclusion is based largely on information that allegedly links a Saudi exile now being held in Canada, Habi Abed Rahim Sayegh, with the Iranian Revolutionary Guards, government officials said.

Rebel leaders ignore U.S. calls for cease fire

Preparing what they described as a final push to victory, rebel leaders ignored U.S. calls for a cease-fire and moved more troops into Kikwit Wednesday, reinforcing the provincial center that is their latest conquest only 240 miles east of this increasingly nervous Zairian capital.

The mood in Kinshasa remained tense, as it has been for weeks, despite an announcement that President Mobutu Sese Seko has agreed, after much hesitation, to meet with rebel leader Laurent Kabila aboard a South African ship Friday. Bill Richardson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations who arranged the meeting, described it as a way to obtain a cease-fire and a transitional government to organize elections.

Terrorist actions raise concerns over peace talks

A wave of terrorist attacks in southern Russia, including the assassination Wednesday of a local official, is casting doubt on the future of the stumbling peace process between Russia and Chechnya.

Undeterred, top negotiators went ahead with talks they had planned in Grozny, the Chechen capital. They issued a statement afterward that Itar-Tass news agency quoted as saying, "The terrorist acts cause alarm for the peace process in the region" and calling on Russian and Chechen presidents to protect the peace process.

Moderates on both sides think extremists are now trying to stir up bad feelings to give them a chance to drop peace talks.

Writer gives parents credit for her success in college

More than 6,000 of us are ready to take the big plunge into adulthood by graduating in eight days (who's counting?)

This big plunge into infinity probably will be one of the most liberating and petrifying experiences in our lives — going into the real world.

For the last few years, we have been in a purgatory between childhood and adulthood.

Students are supposed to act like adults, but, instead, we really act like children.

At graduation, our parents, family and friends will be there marking the event as "ending another chapter" in our lives. The fact is, some of us are reluctant to move on to the next chapter and are perfectly happy with the current one.

For the last four years, I have attended this University under the careful eye of my parents.

They have put me through college and made sure that I did not starve in Carbondale.

They also hauled all my junk across campus and the city so I could move to one place or another.

When a test went wrong, mommy and daddy always were a short drive away. With their consultation and words of encouragement, life was comfortable and worry-free.

But next week, those worry-free days will end.

After graduation I'm planning to move far away to start my life and deal with the obstacles.

For the first time, I will be away from two people who have demonstrated the need to know where I'm going, who I'm with and if I'm getting enough rest.

Sound like co-dependency? It could be, and I will be the first one to admit it.

Now, I'm not advocating that college students should attend school near their parents. Some college students are better off going to school away from their homes rather than close to them.

But in my case, as the perpetual baby (I'm the youngest) in the family, I am a weebling — always have been and always will be — when it comes to family bonding.

As any of my professors will admit (in private), I had trouble with some classes.

I had to take some of them for two semesters to pass. Instead of being the scholar in my family, I am the procrastinator.

But I have the drive to succeed, and I would not be here today if I did not have it.

The road of my higher education has been rocky, narrow and sometimes a dead end.

But my parents were "on me" to get my **** together and get through SIUC or not go to school at all.

So I buckled down, turned off the television and began to study like I never had before. The result of my efforts is my chance to get out of SIUC, and my conclusion is that anything is achievable — even graduation and a promising career.

My parents have taught me the basic truths about life:

- Never lie, steal, cheat or deceive anyone;
- Do not drink too excessively;
- Always say "thank you" and "please";
- Do what you can for the common man and to improve yourself and your community;
- Always work hard for your earnings;
- Respect yourself;
- Love those around you;
- Most of all, be able to recognize the good and evil in people.

No, this is not a Republican-family-values promo ad, but instead a list of time-tested principles on growing up to be a moral person (the "Snow White" syndrome).

If it were not for the love and encouragement from my parents (and my friends had a part in this too), I would not be taking the plunge next week.

College students may stray from their parents, and sometimes that is the best thing to do, but in the end, the students come back to the parents for encouragement (and money).

Our Word

Writer's block

Students should take the time to improve their writing skills

THE BURDEN OF MAKING SIUC STUDENTS better writers should fall on the students themselves, not just on the English Department.

It is a sad fact that some students who enter SIUC or other universities write below college level. These students have difficulties using grammar, constructing sentences and writing coherent thoughts.

THESE STUDENTS ARE THE REAL VICTIMS of a bitter cycle. They do not grasp composition and grammar in high school, and instead wait until college to learn the basics.

The cycle bogs down many professors, who have been trained to teach at a college level, not the high-school level.

Both the professors and the students become frustrated with a dilemma that could be solved with more effort from the students.

SOME STUDENTS WILL GLIDE THROUGH high school and college without being able to express themselves concisely on paper.

They will end up doing poorly in their writing classes; they even will fail those classes just because they did not take the time to practice writing.

It is the responsibility of the students who cannot write well to make themselves better writers.

PROFESSORS AND WRITING PROGRAMS (such as the Writing Center in Faner Hall and the Saluki Success series) at SIUC are engines for improving students' writing capabilities.

They are there to point out writing inadequacies and advise students of better techniques. Professors are not to blame, but should be part of the solution.

THE PROPOSAL FROM THE UNIVERSITY core curriculum executive council to decrease the size of English writing classes' sections would make one-on-one instruction with professors (or teaching assistants) more realistic.

Studies have shown that students who take advantage of that one-on-one contact do better in their classes.

Another proposal to make all freshmen and transfer students take a writing test upon entering SIUC also would detect their specific weaknesses.

From there, a specific remedial English program could be assigned to the students who have those writing weaknesses.

The other proposals — expanding the Writing Center and requiring all freshmen and transfer students to own a grammar manual — also would help solve the problem.

THOSE STUDENTS WHO CANNOT WRITE well are examples of students who fell through the cracks. Somewhere in their education, those students did not fully comprehend English grammar and basic rules for language usage.

What they can do today is read more, attend more sessions on being better writers and make it a point to write more.

Becoming better writers will help students pass composition classes and receive better grades on research papers and projects.

It is time for students to take responsibility for their educations.

Students should have voice in contract renewal decision

Dear Editor:

This letter is in agreement with Kyra Mills' April 10 letter to the editor concerning the recent developments in the clothing and textiles program.

I am a senior in the C&T program, and I agree with Kyra and do not embrace the decision not to renew the contracts of Janice Threw and Michelle Trueblood.

The decision is totally wrong as well as ridiculous.

They are the kind of instructors that we need. They are the only instructors in the C&T program who are upbeat, informed and fashion conscious.

Their teaching styles are exemplary and inspiring. They challenge students to reach their full potential.

Both instructors care about their students professionally as well as personally. I think it is time that all students take a stand.

We pay tuition and should have a voice in the quality of instruction we receive. I do not pay full tuition to have the courses these two instructors teach assigned to graduate students.

Graduate students are trying to make their own way through college and do not have as much time to dedicate to teaching as a full-time instructor.

The enrollment in C&T already is decreasing. We cannot afford to lose these two instructors.

The students of C&T are not happy with this decision.

I urge Dean Quisenberry and Chairman John Washburn to rethink their decision. After all, isn't this University about the students?

Instructors Trueblood, Threw assets to SIUC clothing and textile program

Dear Editor:

We (the students of the clothing and textiles program) are writing in regards to the decision to not reappoint Michelle Trueblood and Janice Threw.

The clothing and textile student population was very upset to hear of this decision. We feel that Janice Threw and Michelle Trueblood are two of the best instructors within the clothing and textile program.

We have learned tremendous amounts of knowledge from them through classes and talking to them on a personal basis.

This decision has been a huge shock and taken as a devastating loss to the educational well-being of the clothing and textile students.

We, the students, were pleased to learn of the appointment of a new faculty member.

However, we were appalled at the loss of two instructors in order to bring about this addition.

The clothing and textile program is a small but growing department at SIUC. The program owes much of its success to Michelle and Janice.

We students pay tuition and feel we deserve a voice in who teaches our classes.

We want you to know we do NOT embrace this decision and ask for the opportunity to speak on behalf of Janice Threw and Michelle Trueblood.

Guest columnist misinformed

Dear Editor:

I am responding to the ridiculous and insane Guest Column written by Umar Rashid Jaji, published on April 24 in the Daily Egyptian.

What on God's green earth possessed you to make such a fool of yourself and the party for which you stand?

The WORKING CLASS is the one that revolts (that was question 57, answer A). The intellectuals are the ones that either have money or work with the ones who have money. ... WHY would they want to give that up?

Yes, this country was founded by revolutionaries, but these people were guided by a book called the Wealth of Nations (not a good communist title, I might add).

There is not enough time or space to address all of the points that you make.

Suffice to say, you are way off base.

Please, go to class, learn about both sides before you form an opinion, and then make your decision. I'm sure that VLADIMIR LENIN would have wanted it that way.

New floor for Arena should take back seat to academic funding

Dear Editor:

I understand that the Arena needs a new floor (the series on the athletic fee increase in the Daily Egyptian) because the athletes' feet hurt on the old one, and we need to put a third-rate basketball team (SIUC) on a second-rate cable station (ESPN) for the purpose of "notoriety."

If a shiny new floor is the greatest of our worries, the University must be doing wonderfully with its academic programs, or we are deluded with blatantly-misplaced priorities.

Sports only appeal to a minority of the students.

The majority of students, myself included, have spent their college careers in horribly-underfunded academic programs.

The three departments I have been around in my college career — cinema and photography, theater and music — seem to be the starving departments at SIUC.

Is this done to mock us as "starving artists?"

Does the University think that making do with what little we have is some sort of character builder, and spoiling athletes is ethical?

The money for their frivolities is coming out of my tuition.

The athletes (with sore feet) are largely going to school for free and are riding through college on my money.

When I entered SIUC in the fall 1994, I earned an academic scholarship. It was one year, non-renewable, and based on my achievements in high school.

If I were ever to receive another scholarship, it would, of course, be based on my academic performance or artistic merit.

Sports scholarships are given on the basis of athletic achievement and will last during an entire college career, regardless of how that player performs once he gets here. I do not know of any athletic scholarship that has been revoked because a player fouled too many times or missed too many free throws.

Some athletes leave after three years to go "pro," often without an academic degree to their name.

Some of us stay and pay for another year of schooling (and athletics that we don't care about in the same bursar bill) to ensure that we are prepared to enter the working world.

A new Arena floor is not going to enhance my college career.

A more organized library maybe? Safer, adequately lit places to walk after dark? One can dream, I guess.

Sore feet on basketball players should be secondary to the fact that inadequate ventilation in the cinema and photography photo lab is poisoning its students.

Motorcycling: A hobby for some is a way of living for others

The roar of the engine, the authority of the handlebars that rest beneath your fingers and the rush of adrenaline that fills your body when you whiz by motorists who slowly putt along on any highway: This is what transpires when riding. Feeling the wind blow through your hair and the power of cruising down a road with nothing surrounding you but the beauty of the outdoors is something many people adopt this time of year.

Motorcycling to some is a lifestyle and to others it is just a hobby. Whatever reason a motorcyclist has for getting on that bike, riding is a feeling of freedom.

Get Your Motor Running

Carl Barnett, a Carbondale resident, has been riding Harley-Davidsons for about 17 years. Even though he is adorned in a black leather vest and black thick-soled boots — the stereotypical biker gear — he does not consider himself to be a biker.

"I am not a biker," he said. "I happen to be a motorcycle enthusiast."

Barnett said that riding motorcycles and the reason people do it is an emotional subject to tackle.

"We just love to ride," he said. "You don't need all the tons of metal around you to get you from point A to point B, so why not just ride a motorcycle? If I have to explain it, you will never understand. Riding is just like your heart beating. Some people just do it because they love it. There's no reason."

Jeff Johnson, a junior in advertising from Sandwich, has lived the lifestyle of a motorcyclist for about five years. He said the feeling of riding in a car can never match the love that he has for riding a motorcycle. Even though he now owns a 1993 Suzuki GSXR 750, which is more of a sport-style bike, he hopes to someday buy a Harley-Davidson.

"I had a motocross bike when I was a kid, and I have just continued to ride," he said. "I love riding in the open air. There isn't that closed feeling of being in a car. It's just a feeling of freedom. I'm still in the part of my life where I'm into speed. That's why I own the style of bike that I do."

"The best thing about riding in the summer is that a bunch of people meet up at the Dairy Queen, and we all just get a big group of people and ride around. Sometimes we get a big pack and ride out to the country. It's really nice because everyone is so relaxed and cool. I think that's a big part of riding. Most of the people who ride are pretty cool people."

Even though she has not been into riding motorcycles her entire life, Jan Cleveland, of Carmi, has a new appreciation of motorcycling after she took the SIUC Motorcycle Riders Course last weekend.

"I really wanted to learn how to ride a bike by myself," she said. "I have ridden on the back of bikes before, but I have never ridden one by myself. Some of my friends ride, and now I can ride with them."

"This course really taught me a lot of good things. I was so fearful of getting on a motorcycle by myself before I took this class, and now I cannot only get on a bike, I can ride it. I'm 50 years old and when I walked into the classroom everyone was so young, but we all just helped each other out. I know that I walked away from this course with some good solid knowledge of motorcycles."

Learning to Ride

The SIUC Motorcycle Riders Course is a weekend program that teaches the basics of riding and controlling a motorcycle through classroom work and riding on an open range. The course has been taught at SIUC since 1968, and SIUC was one of the first schools in the state to offer such a course. The course is offered 24 times a year.

The first class is usually on a Friday night from 6 to 9. In this class, two instructors describe the basic parts of a motorcycle that a person would need to know to ride it. Movies are shown about the joys of motorcycling, and people who take the course also begin to understand the dangers that come along with riding motorcycles.

The next day from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. the class meets out at the range where they will go through many exercises to meet the required standards to pass a test at the end of the course. Along with slowly beginning to control a motorcycle and extremely thorough directions, more classroom work is completed.

Another day of range work, riding instructions and classroom work must be completed before the final riding test and written test are given. The instructors stress the importance of 100 percent attendance to pass.

Mike Rose, a sophomore in microbiology from Bolingbrook and an instructor for the course, said he has a passion for riding motorcycles, and feels gratified about teaching people to ride.

"In all honesty it's a really fun job," he said. "I know that I have to get up early on Saturdays and Sundays, but the feeling of taking someone who knows nothing about motorcycles and then teaching them how to ride is awesome."

Skip Starkey, the assistant coordinator of the course, said it is not just a job for the instructors.

"It is a very rewarding experience."

BIKES OR TRIKES: Students of the Motorcycle Riders Course line up their bikes to begin an exercise Saturday.

he said. "There is so much satisfaction of teaching people how to ride safely. I think all of our instructors have a really good time with the students. I really feel fortunate with my job, because a lot of people don't feel like we do about our jobs."

Looking For Adventure

I have ridden on the back of motorcycles my entire life and never really thought much about having control of the bike. However, when I decided to learn how to ride a motorcycle, I had to decide on how I wanted to learn. I could have had my father or a friend teach me on their huge motorcycles, or I could have just practiced on a country road. But, what I decided on was to spend an entire weekend learning the basics.

Now that I have taken the SIUC Motorcycle Riders Course, I know a lot more about motorcycles than when to lean or how to hold on. I know how to ride and control a bike safely.

I may have spent an entire weekend getting up early and sitting in a classroom, but it is something I will have for the rest of my life. It is a hard thing to explain when you have a passion for motorcycles, but you learn that it truly is just an extension of your body.

So, the next time someone rolls up next to you at a stop light, flips up her protective mask on her helmet and revs the engine of her motorcycle, it just might be me. Motorcycling is a way of life for many people, and now I've become hooked.

CRUCIAL CONFLICT:

Grotp calls its style Rodeo; hoedown keeps audience on its feet.

TRACY TAYLOR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With their own style called Rodeo, the Chicago-based hip-hop cowboys Crucial Conflict uses harmonious lyrics and rhymes to make a crowd move.

When most people think of the rodeo and cowboys, thoughts of old Western movies and wide-rimmed hats come to mind, but the show-down that Crucial Conflict brings on stage is far from the spaghetti Westerns of the days of old.

"Rodeo is rhymes of dirty English and we are the organization representing it — Crucial Conflict," band member Cold Hard said.

Crucial Conflict has been together for five years and signed with Palace Universal records in 1996 for their first album "The Final TIC."

Cold Hard said that with the assistance of their road manager, Shorty Capone, the group was able to get money together for a record deal.

Because Crucial Conflict has been together for five years, they are able to blend their voices and rhymes together in such a way that they could compete with any group using four-part harmony.

Cold Hard said that although many artists from Chicago try to portray tough-guy images, Crucial Conflict just tries to stay original.

"Chicago artists come off hard, but we do our own thing," he said.

Although Crucial Conflict is not on tour right now, they made a special appearance in Carbondale at Shryock Auditorium Saturday to strengthen their home base.

Auditorium Saturday night.

Cold Hard, Wild Style, Kilo and Never began the concert with their own flavor of "Can't help but to be bogus, man, coming from the C-H-I" that kept the crowd bouncing and dancing.

With the crowd singing along with every song, Crucial Conflict jammed cuts including "Desperado," "Hay" and "Showdown."

Cold Hard said the group toured in 1996 and is working to bring its second album out in June. The group also is working on a compilation album called "Karachi." The album will include the artists T-Babe, THB, the Gades (Renegades), Pass The Blunt, MFD (Marked For Death), Franki P and The Riddler.

A lot can be expected from such a group who knows how to rock the party and keep the crowd jumping.

"As we learned the music business we've matured," Cold Hard said. "We'll bring more rodeo stuff (on the new album) and keep it real from the west-side streets of Chicago."

A crowd of SIUC students and Carbondale residents mingle during a show at a 1995 Sunset Concert in Turley Park. The traditional summer event attracts a diverse audience to Turley Park and the steps of Shryock Auditorium. # Summer sunsets bring musical diversity

SUNSET CONCERT SERIES:

A popular tradition brings the Carbondale and SIUC communities together.

BRETT WILCOXSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While the bands already are booked for the fast-approaching annual Sunset Concerts, for one student, it really does not matter who plays.

Chad Minier has attended four Sunset Concerts in as many years, and he plans to show up this year because of the atmosphere the shows offer.

"It really doesn't matter what the music is. I'll go as long as I can get off work," said Minier, a senior in music education from Benton. "It just adds some spice to the summer down here. (The shows) always get a lot of people together in a safe environment and have a lot of fun."

Minier added that the concerts always feature an abundance of variety, not only in the music performed, but also in the type of attendees.

"From blues to rock to country to big band, I've been really pleased with the variety" he said. "A lot of people come to these shows who don't normally come out, so you get to see people you haven't seen in years. And you get to see a variety of people of different ages and musical tastes who usually aren't in one place together."

Drinking with friends and dancing to the music of a great band as the pink half-sun gently hovers over the horizon and then disappears, giving way to the shimmer of the lackadaisical summer moon. This is what the Sunset Concerts are about, and they are about to begin.

The seven Sunset Concert shows this year will begin June 12, and will take place from 7 until 9:30 p.m. every Thursday through July 24. The location of the shows will alternate between the steps of Shryock Auditorium and Turley Park, located off route 13 on the west side of town.

Jason Bolden, Student Programming Council summer and fall concerts director, said that this year's Sunset Concert shows will feature acts for people of all musical tastes.

The first show, which is June 12 on the steps of Shryock Auditorium, will feature Whiskeytown, a rock-a-billy type band, similar to the Reverend Horton Heat. The second show scheduled for June 19 will be The Stuart Martz Band, a Celtic group. The June 26 show will be The Jimmy Johnson Blues Act.

The July 3 show will be the Rhythm Rockers, a Motown-style group. On July 10, One People, a reggae act, will make its appearance and The Tom Andes Quartet, a jazz foursome, will perform July 17. Vertical Horizon, an acoustic pop-rock band finish off the series on July 24.

And while watching the bands both on and off campus, Sunset Concert-goers this summer will have the opportunity to consume their beverages of choice.

Because of a 3-2 Carbondale City Council vote in January, the Sunset Concerts at Turley Park will be designated as "Fair Days," a designation that allows alcohol consumption by those attendees who are of legal drinking age. This vote to renew "Fair Days" takes place every year.

Alcohol will be allowed at the Shryock steps shows as well. Bolden said that the city voted to allow alcohol, and the University then followed suit.

"It was a decision by (Chancellor) Donald Beggs," he said. "As I understand it, if the community says 'yes,' then the University usually follows that and says 'yes.'"

Sunset Concerts have a rich history in Carbondale. They began in 1977. In 1987 the city did not allow alcohol at the Sunset Concerts in Turley Park, and the Park District reported that those shows averaged 200 to 250 people. The concerts at Shryock continued to allow alcohol consumption because the city ordinance does not govern policy on campus. Those shows averaged 2,000 to 2,500 people.

Bolden said he remembers attending Sunset

Concerts when alcohol was not allowed, and he said those shows were in fact sparsely attended. Bolden said he believes that is why alcohol is being allowed this year.

"A few years ago there was no liquor there and it was a flop," he said. "They allowed it because it's been a tradition. When they didn't allow liquor, there was no one there."

While alcohol is a major issue for some prospective attendees, Bolden said it is not the issue on which prospective attendees should base their decisions whether to attend. He said there are more important issues at hand.

Bolden said Sunset Concerts are an important chance for various Carbondale residents to get together and enjoy a common bond—a love of music.

"This is for the community, for the students, and for the University faculty and staff," he said. "The community here doesn't really get along that well with the college kids, and the Sunset Concerts kind of break that down. That's what really matters, that's what sunset is about."

Bolden said SPC booked such a diversity of bands because they wanted to include bands that would appeal to a variety of audience members.

"We booked music that everybody loves," he said. "Whether you're a 60-year-old community member, or 18 to 21 and a college student, there's a week and a band for everybody."

Romy & Michelle: Blondes have more dumb

TIM SANGER
MOVIE REVIEWER

There's something cinematically endearing about morons. Film seems to capture the mental idiosyncrasies of idiots the world over and parade them before our viewing eyes, this love affair inherent upon seeing them strive against their faults, get the upper hand on others . . . hell, who am I kidding? We love to laugh gleefully at them.

Forgive my crude demeanor, but reviewing a film such "Romy and Michelle's High School Reunion" doesn't require eloquence. The film has enough of its own.

The story follows two bubble-headed bombshells (Lisa Kudrow and Mira Sorvino) toiling the club scene of Venice Beach while extrapolating diet tips. When word comes around of their 10-year high school reunion, Romy and Michelle vow to improve their lives for the nostalgic event.

You'd think the whole valley girl shtick would have worn its welcome with every redux seen, and at face value, there's no reason why "Romy and Michelle's" should not fall flat on its face. The good news is the film is heads above the usual formula, a concession granted by the temerity of Kudrow and Sorvino. Their performances are so hysterical and their characters so lovable that they could carry the film no matter what engagement they were going to. The film is barbed just enough to be black humored, while still retaining a sense of fun.

The real treat is watching Kudrow and Sorvino rip up the screen. Sorvino, one of the most talented of today's actresses, is a whiz with dialect so believable she could convincingly pull off the drawl of a stuttering Samoan trucker. Kudrow, constantly gawking in air-headed shock at every diversion, is equally proficient in getting the laughs. Most comedy teams consist of getting the proverbial Harpo in center stage, yet Sorvino and Kudrow are equally capable and entertaining. Think of a ditzy Rosencrantz and Guildenstern as leggy blondes in gaudy miniskirts.

People love watching the pratfalls of idiots on the screen, and Romy and Michelle are not only endearing, but hilarious. ★ ★ ★ ★

VIDEO PICK: "THE APARTMENT"

Two of the greats of comedy, Preston Sturges and Billy Wilder, realized that humor can be found best upon the misfortunes of others. Wilder's "The Apartment" is a flawless blend of wit and harried humor. A beleaguered bachelor (Jack Lemmon) finds himself constantly loaning out his apartment to his bosses and their ditz mistresses. He soon finds himself torn between his cooperative ambition and his own affection for the superior's mistress (Shirley MacLaine).

Nobody does the harried nice guy better than Lemmon, and Wilder ("The Seven Year Itch") has the class to let his actors bring the humor out of his smart script. One of the classics of comedy. ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Chemical Brothers
DIG YOUR OWN HOLE
Astralwerks Records ~ 1997

• REVIEWER'S CHOICE •

Beginning with the funk-thumping straight-off-the-rave-scene tune "Block Rockin' Beats," The Chemical Brothers' "Dig Your Own Hole" has proven that they can keep musical pace with fellow Brit dance scene extraordinaires Prodigy and Underworld.

With a sound that must have been pulled from the ambient nether world, dowsed with the funk of James Brown and finally thrown into the mixer with a pinch of KMFDM, "Dig Your Own Hole" carries mixing to a new level. For local party hosts who have trouble getting their lead-butted attendees out of their chairs and away from their label-less beers, this album offers an alternative. If this one does not get them up and grooving, nothing short of shock therapy is likely to.

While the UK seems to be a veritable fountain of great entertainers these days, these guys may be the most noteworthy.

Collective Soul
DISCIPLINED BREAKDOWN
Atlantic Records ~ 1997

After hearing Collective Soul's latest effort, "Disciplined Breakdown," several arduous times, it became painfully obvious to me that this is a band destined for state fairs across the country.

Following up their critically acclaimed triple platinum 1995 self-titled release, Collective Soul has managed an album that is sickeningly repetitive and stagnant.

Fans of the ever-popular Bush can relate this. Bush, like Collective Soul, has proven that success in the music industry can lead to fear of exploration. My soap box aside, this album is not without its strong points.

The fifth track, "Blame," contains some fairly intricate guitar work, highlighting the outstanding axe ability of a musically gifted band.

Overall, this album was an extreme disappointment. Perhaps my expectations were too high. Or maybe this is simply a wake-up call for a group that had better start examining what it is that allows David Lee Roth to rock state fair crowds as seemingly only he can do.

RATING — 1 STAR

INXS
ELEGANTLY WASTED
Mercury Records ~ 1997

In 1980, Australian rock pioneers INXS released their debut self-titled album. Now 17 years and 20-million-sold albums later, the same six members have created an extremely novel album titled "Elegantly Wasted."

Having worn out a copy of their 1987 release "Kick," it is safe to say I was petrified to put this one in the CD player. Having heard "New Sensation" and perhaps most notably, "Devil Inside," countless times during my most defining years, this band may have influenced my musical taste more than any other single band from the '80s. As the opening track "Show Me" wore on, carrying me to the closing attempt "Building Bridges," my body unconsciously relaxed and my fears somehow subsided. This album is not a redundant carbon copy of the band's golden years. This is not to say that "Elegantly Wasted" does not contain any traditional INXS. While this album is not likely to have the kind of mainstream defining effect that their early works did, this is a work that any INXS junky should pick up.

They Might Be Giants
FACTORY SHOWROOM
Elektra Records ~ 1996

In what many traditional fans might label as a departure from their normal get-in-the-waddling-line-and-mambo-to-our-silly-pop-tunes style, They Might Be Giants once again have managed an undeniably fresh sound with their newest upbeat release "Factory Showroom." Opening with an ode to getting it on "S-e-x-x-y," the Johns (Flansburgh and Linnell) burst into this album with a funky conga-slapping groove that even fans-of-old may not recognize as the Giants. By the time one gets to the fifth track, "Metal Detector," even the least avid fan will recognize Linnell's unparalleled voice and keyboard signature. In the seventh track of the album, "Your Own Worst Enemy," the Giants somewhat uncharacteristically explore the depressing world of neuroticism. For music lovers who never have experienced the Giants, this release is not the best place to start.

Rollie Perkins, MD

— book signing —

Team Doc

Sunday, May 4, 1997
3:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.
1300 East Main Street
Carbondale, IL 62901
618-351-0404

Team Doc tells the story of a fictional team physician at an NCAA Division I University. Student-athletes from all sports are presented with a myriad of illnesses and injuries that develop during the practice and competition of the academic year. The major theme is that there is no greater responsibility for a team physician than to protect the health and welfare of student athletes - which is no easy task.

Rollie Perkins, MD is the team physician and chief of sports medicine for Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Chelsea Clinton goes to Stanford

LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON—Take that, Harvard. Princeton too. Chelsea Victoria Clinton has said "no thanks" to white spires and ivy-covered towers. She's going to Stanford, where freshmen sunbathe in February, roller-blade to class, and the marching band's sassaphones are occasionally ornamented with marijuana leaves.

"Planes run out there and phones work out there. E-mail works out there, so we'll be all right," President Clinton remarked.

The first daughter—who loves ballet, excels academically and on a recent trip with her mother to Africa revealed herself to be a thoughtful, articulate teen-ager with actual opinions on world affairs—had her pick of the most prestigious schools in America. After much suspense, the announcement came Wednesday, a 180-line statement released by her mother's office—that Chelsea would enter Stanford University this fall as a member of the class of 2001.

WHEATON

records are filed, Wheaton has 35 days to file a brief. The prosecution has 35 days to file a brief from the date Wheaton files his brief. Wheaton then will have another 14 days to file a reply brief.

He cited an example of how long an appeal can take.

"There was a person who made an appeal in November of 1994, and I first received the information on the case just the other day," he said.

Wepsiec said he will not be trying Wheaton's case.

An appellate prosecutor will represent the state before the appellate court.

Wheaton can have no contact with Reeves while he is out on bond. Other than that, there are no other requirements for Wheaton to follow.

"He just needs to stay out of trouble," said Wepsiec.

Wepsiec also said he is unable to prosecute Wheaton's appeal.

"I have too many cases to deal with," he said. "I kind of wish the judge would have denied the motion, but there is nothing I can do about it."

He said he is not going to criticize Judge David W. Watt, who granted the appeal bond.

"I'm not going to criticize the judge," he said. "All I can do is make my objection in court."

"I'm not the judge and I don't make the ruling," he said.

He said he is confident that the conviction will stand.

"I think it was a clean trial," he said. "I expect the prosecution to prevail (at the appellate level)."

SCUBA

Moving from the shallow water to the deep water was a big step for Mike Cullipher, a freshman in athletic training from Caseyville.

He was unsure of whether or not he would be able to apply the skills he learned in the shallow water to the deep water.

"I was a little apprehensive about it," he said. "Would you know if you would be able to perform what you learned when the water is not just up to your chest?"

Cullipher said learning to scuba dive was exciting, but also required coordination skills.

"It was a very interesting but challenging experience doing everything properly and concentrating at the same time, kicking the fins, breathing correctly and cleaning the mask," he said.

Cullipher said he had only one problem with his first experience scuba diving, but it was nothing that could not easily be corrected.

"I got lightheaded while under the water and I had to ascend to the top and relax for a few minutes," he said.

"You just have to relax, keep following the procedures, go to the top and find out what happened."

Defogging the mask while underwater was a challenging task for many of the new divers to accomplish. Schlichting thought it was the most difficult aspect of the course.

"You have to let water in so you go blind," he said.

"You have to press the top (of the mask) and blow through the nose. You are fiddling with the mask when suddenly you realize, 'I'm not breathing!'"

Kimberly Barnes, a graduate student in rehabilitation from West Frankfort, said the class was well worth the $10 that it cost to take the course.

She wants to move on to bigger scuba experiences by taking an open-water scuba diving course that is not confined to a swimming pool.

"Now I want to get certified and spend the big bucks!" she said.

"I can't wait to see the sharks and the fishes!"

Tow

was discussed by other towing companies.

"We talked about it, and all the towing companies said those numbers weren't right," he said. "How do they know how many need to be dollyed? They're not a tow truck company, they're the city of Carbondale."

Doherty said the dolly is being used more than was expected.

"It's just not economically a good thing for the contractor, and not a good situation for the city or the public," Doherty said.

Crismon does not dispute the city's decision to consider ending the contract.

"If they said they feel something is wrong, I'm not going to hassle it," he said.

Glen's Towing won the city's three-year contract in 1994, but that contract was worded differently than the one the City Council awarded it in February. The company charged the city for regular tows, not just tows that required dollies.

Because the council has voted to end the city's current contract with Glen's, Doherty said the bidding process will begin again. The contract will remain in effect until a new one is awarded.

The city's future towing company will state the towing company will charge the city a flat fee for each tow, whether or not a dolly was used.

"There wouldn't be any special provisions in terms of a dolly or things at the discretion of the contractor," Doherty said.

Crismon does not know whether Glen's will bid for the city's contract.

In other business, the council commended Councilmen John Yow and Loyd C. Sumner for their service on the council. At the next council meeting on Tuesday, Yow and Sumner are scheduled to be replaced by newly elected councilmen John Budstick and Larry Briggs, who won the municipal elections April 1.

Sperm donations spark ethical concerns

NO LIMIT: Doctors says one man fathered 20 children in 1996.

NEWSDAY

Without any legal limit on the number of test-tube progeny, some sperm donors in the New York area have fathered 20 or more children during the past decade, experts say. The idea of one man producing so many children may seem extraordinary under normal circumstances. But while most anonymous sperm donors usually produce only a few successful pregnancies, fertility experts say there are some who have become fathers many times over.

"A year ago we had to exclude a donor who had fathered 20 children," said Albert Anouna, director of a New Jersey sperm bank who recently opened another facility in Manhattan.

Experts say they've heard of privately run sperm banks around the country where donors have fathered 20 or more children. Most established clinics usually limit the number to fewer than 10.

But without any federal laws or national registry, experts admit little is known about that small group among all sperm donors who have helped create so many children. Some critics voice both biological and ethical concerns about this practice.

At a recent hearing of the President's Bioethics Advisory Commission, Moshe Tendler, a biomedical ethics expert at Yeshiva University in Manhattan, said one New York case involved a donor who fathered approximately 50 children. Tendler favors one successful pregnancy per donor.

"I would not allow more than one (artificially induced pregnancy) for fear that the children might someday meet one another and get married," said Tendler. His objection is based on concerns about "consanguinity" — the possibility of marriage between siblings, which can increase the chance for children with disabilities.

Several years ago, Tendler said, he was consulted by doctors in a rare case involving two young people from Great Neck, N.Y., who planned to marry. After a blood test, however, the couple learned that they shared the same biological father — an anonymous sperm donor.

for the Student Center, concessions to McAndrew Stadium and SIU Arena, the Carterville campus snack bar, Touch of Nature and Rainbow's End, which is a campus day care center.

The company also will handle catering for campus events.

Marriott, which has operated the food service in the Student Center since 1986, proposed a food-service plan but was turned down.

The food court will be constructed in the area of Sub City and Pizza Hut, which no longer will operate in the Student Center. The Roman Room will be remodeled.

Tatham said Chartwells provided the preliminary design for the food court, but University architects must review the construction plan to make sure it meets University and state standards.

Construction on the Student Center food court is scheduled to begin June 1.

Tatham said some demolition work could begin before June 1, if approval is given, because there is limited use of the Student Center by students, faculty and staff in late May.

The construction is scheduled to be completed by Aug. 18, one week before classes are scheduled to begin.

"My real hope is to have it done a week before that so we can have some training done," Tatham said. "We're hoping to have it ready to go when the students get back."

Beth Scally, marketing and public information coordinator for University Housing, said students from residence halls will be able to purchase meal plans that will allow them to use their meal cards in the Student Center food court.

She said students who choose the 12-meal plan will be credited $1.75 for each meal they do not eat in the residence halls during the week. She said that money can be used at the Student Center food court.

Money left at the end of the semester will be refunded to the student.

"It will allow our students more options," Scally said, "which we want to make available to them."

She said the 15-meal plan currently gives students $52 per semester to spend at the Student Center.

YOPP

got their master's theses in that area."

Yopp said he became interested in botany because his family owned a large seed store, Yopp Seed Company, in Paducah, Ky.

His connection with the seed store continued during his first years at SIUC.

"For the first five years I taught here, I used to sneak off on Saturdays and work at the seed store," he said. "I worked with the same customers from Metropolis, Anna, Rosiclaire and Dyersburg, Tennessee, that I grew up working with."

"It was really therapeutic for me, to escape the pressures as a young assistant professor, to go down and sell people seed."

James Tweedy, vice chancellor for Administration, said Yopp's retirement will be a great loss to the University.

"He is a very competent administrator and close friend," Tweedy said. "I wish him well and hate to see him leave."

He was instrumental in developing the University's Gene Molecular Biology Program, and received the University's outstanding undergraduate teaching award in 1981.

Yopp began his administrative career as associate dean for research in the College of Science in 1984. Two years later, he was promoted to his current position as Graduate School dean and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and research.

He earned his bachelor's degree in biology from Georgetown University in 1962, and his doctorate in biology from University of Louisville in 1969.

Yopp has overseen this year's Illinois Board of Higher Education review of nearly 90 master's and doctoral programs.

The review prioritized graduate programs based on SIUC's mission.

Yopp said the Graduate School has finished the segment of the process he oversees.

"I would not have considered leaving before this was finished."

One student who often worked with Yopp said he will be missed.

"We're saddened to lose him, because we think he has been very beneficial for graduate students' interests," said Paul LeBlanc, Graduate and Professional Student Council vice president for Graduate School Affairs.

"On the other hand, we are happy for his opportunity. It is a prestigious position, and we wish him the best of luck."

Library Affairs

SIUC Library Affairs May 1997 Seminar Series

Morris Library will offer a series of seminars on electronic research databases and the World Wide Web. Seminars are open to all and will be held in Morris Library. Registration is strongly recommended. To register, please call 453-2818, send an e-mail message to ugl@lib.siu.edu, or stop by the Undergraduate Library Information Desk.

TRACK

and was named to the MVC All-Academic team last spring.

Clendenin said her career at SIUC has went by very quickly. "It's hard to believe," she said, "but it has been a good four years, and I'm happy with how things are going this season so far."

Saluki women's coach Don DeNoon said he also has a hard time believing Clendenin's career is coming to an end.

"It seems like yesterday that she walked into my office and told me she was going to come out for track," DeNoon said. "She went to John A. Logan for the fall semester her freshman year and played volleyball there, and then she transferred here for the spring semester."

"I remember a time when we went out to a field beside my office and we threw the javelin there for the first time. She missed her toes a couple of times, and it was quite an experience. But she's been an extremely dedicated young lady."

Clendenin has picked one of the best times to be at the top of her game. After finishing first in the javelin at the Arkansas State Track Classic April 12 and third at the Sycamore Invitational April 19, she threw a career best of 140-4 in finishing ninth at the Drake Relays Saturday.

"I saw a couple of weeks ago at Arkansas State where she had a throw that was going out toward the 150- or 160-foot range," DeNoon said. "But we had tremendous 25-mile-an-hour wind gusts that just knocked it down and took it out of bounds at the same time. So it is in her to really get it out there and qualify for the NCAA Championships."

SALUKI TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETE

The Salukis travel to Bloomington, Ind., for the National Invitational Saturday. The meet is the Salukis' final preparation for the MVC Championship in Normal May 14-17.

DeNoon said Clendenin will have a great chance to prepare for the MVC Championship and possibly the NCAA Championships, which Bloomington also will sponsor May 31-June 3.

"It should be the best javelin-throwing area she has been able to compete on the whole year," DeNoon said. "She gained a lot of confidence last week even though she only got to throw three times."

"It only takes one throw. Her technique has come along pretty good, and certainly her strength is there."

Regardless of what happens for the rest of the season, Clendenin said her career has passed her original expectations.

"I did a little more than I thought," Clendenin said. "I knew the competition at the college level was a little different. I came from a small high school, and being an outstanding athlete at a small high school is a lot different than going to a bigger high school or even a university."

"I took the challenge coming in knowing that it was going to be a hard thing to try to do, but I've been happy with how things have turned out."

STRENGTH:

SIUC javelin thrower says hard work and conditioning pay off.

RYAN KEITH

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An extra effort on the track and in the weight room is paying off at just the right time for SIUC women's track and field athlete Vena Clendenin.

Clendenin, a senior from Rockwood, was named to the 1996 National Strength and Conditioning Coaches Association All-American team April 16, for excelling in strength training and conditioning.

For Clendenin, who throws the javelin and competes in several other events for the Saluki, the honor was a reward for four years of determination on and off the field.

"A lot of hard work has paid off," Clendenin said. "I like to lift, and the weight room is a place where I like to go. The award is a nice gesture for my performance in there and on the track."

Clendenin, who was nominated by Saluki strength and conditioning coach Doug Salmon, also was selected for her achievements on the track and in the classroom.

Salmon said Clendenin was an easy choice for his nomination.

"Vena has an outstanding work ethic," Salmon said. "She's put in many hours of hard work during the season, and she had stayed during the summer as well."

"She has a great attitude. She's very coachable and willing to do everything it takes to be a great athlete."

Clendenin has had success on and off the track in her career at SIUC. Clendenin earned Missouri Valley Conference All-Conference honors with a second-place finish in the javelin last year, and won the javelin at the SEMOion Relays, Murray State Twilight and the Saluki Invitational in 1996.

Clendenin has a 3.33 GPA in early childhood education at SIUC

Athletic Department to meet proportionality. It can either add women's sports, drop men's sports or use Roster Management.

Because the Athletic Department has not been able to add women's sports and does not want to drop men's sports, then it must reach proportionality through Roster Management, an initiative it began this year.

West said under Roster Management, the men's coaches have a maximum number of athletes they can carry on their roster, and the women's coaches have a minimum number of athletes they can carry on their roster.

"Some of (the women's coaches) aren't any happier than some of the men because the kids that sit the bench are the antagonist," West said. "(The athletes) don't get to play, but yet they are encouraged to build up their squads. It takes a special kind of person to stay out, work, not get a scholarship, give up all that time and not get much chance to play."

SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart said the program is hard because women are less likely to walk on to an athletic team. Walk-on players are athletes who is not recruited for the team and have to earn their playing time.

"It is hard to get women to walk on," Hart said. "Women don't just like to walk on. If they are there they want to participate. It makes it tougher for the coaches. It is not a healthy situation, but it is our only way to reach ratio."

West said the coaches may not like the choice of Roster Management, but it is one of their few options.

"There aren't too many other options so (Roster Management) is what we are trying to do," West said. "What we have said to the coaches is that: 'This is our first year we have done that, and it has helped, and the University is trying to recruit students."

"And some of our male coaches rightfully say: 'This is the counter to the broader goal of the University to recruit students, like if I can recruit someone to play baseball, even if they aren't going to play a whole lot, we have added another student to SIUC and now you are telling me not to do that.'"

"Now that is one of the criticisms of Roster Management."

However, West said, the Athletic Department is trying to encourage sports in which everyone can participate, such as track and field, to increase the number of female athletes.

"(Women's track and field coach) Don DeNoon has done a magnificent job of pumping up our numbers," West said. "He carries a larger-than-average squad, which helps our numbers tremendously."

West said the Athletic Department should work with coaches in special situations.

"Then we have told the coaches: 'If you have a good athlete that takes you over that number, come talk to us because we are managing if we see we have two more track women over here, we may let baseball have two more,'" West said.

"We are trying real hard to accommodate the coaches and still be in compliance with the law."

Beth Hasheider, a junior from Okawville and member of the women's basketball team, said it is hard to defend Roster Management.

"It shouldn't necessarily be straight numbers," she said. "Making quotas is hard to defend. It should be based on money."

Hasheider said it is important to examine why the Athletic Department makes the quota.

"I think it is a hard situation if you can't find quality athletes," she said. "If we had to have someone, it doesn't benefit anyone, including women. If they are restricting the numbers (for men's teams) to free up money for women, then they should do it."

Hart said the University is complying with Title IX to avoid trouble, but he also noted the University is farther ahead than some schools in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"Most everyone is working toward that goal (compliance) knowing full well you could face a lawsuit," Hart said. "We're very good. We might be at the top of the heap in our conference."

If the University does not comply with Title IX, it could be investigated by the Office of Civil Rights. The Athletic Department would be asked to implement a program to ensure gender equity or have federal funding taken away.

If the Athletic Department did not use Roster Management to reach proportionality, there would be other ways it could comply with the law.

One way is by adding more women's sports to the program. But SIUC cannot comply with this part of the law, West said, because the Athletic Department has cut women's sports such as gymnastics and field hockey.

"This is the most sensitive issue," West said. "We could add soccer here, and in time we probably should add soccer. We would get enough women out that we would be in compliance."

"The problem is, it would cost. We would have to have scholarships, we would have to have coaching, we would have to have uniforms, we would have to have a field. That is what most schools are doing, they are adding women's sports."

The SIUC Board of Trustees are scheduled to vote in June on a proposal to increase the annual full-time student athletic fee 85 percent over a five-year period, from the 1997 rate of $106 to $196 by 2002. A portion of this money would be used by the Athletic Department to pay interest on the $1.5 million in bonds it sold to generate funds to repair aging facilities and to build a softball clubhouse.

Hart agrees money is the main issue when it comes to complying with Title IX.

"It is all about money," Hart said. "It is so evil to be so dependent on that, yet it is our existence. If we don't get the fee increase, we are out of business."

Another option the Athletic Department has to attempt to comply with Title IX is to drop a men's sport from the program, but the University dropped men's wrestling in fall 1982 and men's gymnastics in fall 1989 to better reach proportionality.

"We have been through the drop phase," West said. "And we don't want to drop any more, but that is an opportunity. That we could do. We would have to drop something with large enough numbers to make the numbers integral."

But the dropping of men's sports has already upset coaches in the Athletic Department.

"I think most of the coaches across the country feel bitter," men's track and field coach Bill Cornell said. "We had one of the best gymnastics programs in the country, and they dropped that because they had to accommodate for equality."

"It sounds like a simple operation. But where does the money come from? If they can't reach equality in the whole athletic department, then they have to take from the men and give to the women."

Hart said the University may have some improvements to make, but he thinks the program is satisfactory to the athletes.

"I think (the program) is pretty positive," he said. "There are a pocket of some people who might be unhappy. I don't think they know the whole story."

The final story in the series running tomorrow will examine part three of Title IX law which requires equal benefits for athletes.

seventh inning.

Wesleyan also got the job done at the plate, scoring five runs in the third inning off of Saluki reliever Dave Anderson. Wesleyan capitalized on two errors by Saluki third baseman Matt Dettman and knocked three singles and two doubles off of Anderson. Anderson was one of nine Saluki pitchers to see action in Tuesday's game.

"With the exception of one pitcher, you saw eight pretty good performances," Callahan said.

"For the most part, our pitching is not what cost us the game. It was not coming to play, it was failure to make an adjustment offensively, crucial errors and bad, bad baseball."

"Matt Dettman cost us about five or six runs himself. Not only the errors at third base, but I talk to our runners at third base all of the time, mainly on sacrifice flies where there are runners on second and third, to go hard across the plate."

"Dettman loafs across the plate like he's at the senior prom with no worries on his mind and he didn't score on a play he should have," Callahan said.

"It's pretty bad when you cost your team not only errors on defense, but you can't even get across the plate in a timely manner and you cost your team a run on offense when it should be a gimme. There's no excuse for that," he said.

"That wasn't pretty. If we charged admission, we'd be giving refunds. I would demand that everybody wait in line to get their money back. That's bad, bad baseball."

Next up for the Salukis is a four-game road series at Indiana State University beginning Friday.

Bowe announces retirement

Riddick Bowe announced his retirement from boxing Wednesday. Bowe says he is leaving the ring to become part of a community service program by Home Box Office entitled "Reaching Beyond the Ring."

"Although my time inside the ring has come to an end, it's just the start of an exciting and important career for me," Bowe said. Bowe, 29, steps away with a 40-1-1 record and 32 knockouts. He last fought on Dec. 14, when he was awarded a win by disqualification over Andrew Golota.

Bowe, who often allowed his weight to balloon between fights, joined the United States Marines earlier this year to fulfill a childhood dream. But he was discharged just 11 days after arriving at a Marine Corps' boot camp in Parris Island, S.C.

Bowe defeated Evander Holyfield in November 1992 to capture the undisputed world heavyweight title. He gave up the World Boxing Council belt following a dispute, then lost the World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation heavyweight versions of the title to Holyfield in November 1993.

Bowe, a native of Brooklyn, won four New York Golden Glove titles and won a silver medal at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul. He turned professional on March 6, 1989.

Pacers, Celtics lose coaches

Larry Brown stepped down as head coach of the Indiana Pacers Wednesday, possibly opening the door for him to join the Boston Celtics and for Celtics executive Larry Bird to become coach of his homestate Pacers.

The job in Boston officially became vacant Wednesday when the Celtics announced that M.L. Carr will not return as head coach. Carr also serves as the team's general manager and is expected to remain with the team in a front office capacity.

Boston went 15-67 under Carr, who said he looks forward to remaining with the Celtics.

Brown met with Pacers president Donnie Walsh on Wednesday morning and his resignation was announced at an afternoon news conference.

Brown guided the Pacers to a 39-43 record in 1996-97, just his second losing season in 24 years as a coach in the NBA, ABA and college.

Brown leaves as the most successful coach in the 21-year NBA history of the franchise, compiling a 190-138 record.

Brown's all-time NBA coaching record is 624-480. He was 229-107 in four seasons in the ABA and 177-61 in seven years at the college level, including a national championship with Kansas in 1988. His overall coaching record is 1,030-648.

Salukis fall to Division II club

'BAD, BAD BASEBALL':

Coach says he is disgusted by team's lack of effort against a team they should have beat.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Saluki baseball coach Dan Callahan was rudely reminded of April 6 after his Salukis dropped an 8-4 decision to Division II Kentucky Wesleyan University at Abe Martin Field Tuesday.

Callahan was seething red after the Salukis committed four errors and managed just six hits in dropping to 18-25 on the season. He said the team played as bad as in a doubleheader loss to the University of Northern Iowa April 6.

"That's about as bad as it gets," Callahan said. "The only thing that rivals that performance is Northern Iowa. I'm absolutely disgusted."

"When you play like we did today, you get beat by almost everybody. We'll address it tomorrow morning at 5 a.m. when we meet again."

After a slow start, Kentucky Wesleyan scored five runs in the third inning and added three runs in the eighth and ninth innings to improve to 18-22 on the year.

"You saw one pretty good team that came to play," Callahan said. "The people that did come out for that fiasco saw some pretty good pitching, saw a pitcher who battled. They got some timely hitting and they capitalized on some errors."

"Granted, they're probably a quality Division II team. But I wouldn't have taken one of their players over anybody on our ballclub. The bottom line is they came to play and we didn't, and I'm totally discouraged."

The Salukis opened the game strong, scoring two runs in the first inning on a single by Aaron Jones, three walks, an error and an RBI single by Joel Peters. SIUC added another run in the second on an error that led to an RBI out by Joe Schley.

But Wesleyan's defense and pitcher Brian Prange settled down and held the Salukis scoreless until Jerry Hairston hit a home run to left-center field in the

Gender equity law forces team quotas

RESTRICTIVE:

Federal law puts limits on male athletes, pads female rosters.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Editor's note: This is the second story in a three-part series exploring aspects of Title IX and the SIUC Athletic Department's effort to comply with the law. The previous story can be found on the DE's Web site at

<http://www.dailyegyptian.com>

The SIUC Athletic Department has had a difficult time balancing the numbers of male and female athletes to comply with the most important part of Title IX, which states that there should be the opportunity for all athletes to participate, an athletic administrator says.

Title IX was passed by Congress in 1972 to ensure gender equity at all federally funded institutions. The number of male and female athletes must be proportional to the number of male and female students.

"This is the part that gets most of the attention because that is what athletics is all about," Associate Athletic Director

TITLE IX Gender Equity
No. 2 of 3

Charlotte West said. "The ultimate test is, do your athletic participants by gender reflect your overall student population?"

West said it is easier for SIUC to meet that requirement because the University is 42 percent female and 58 percent male.

Therefore, the SIUC Athletic Department must have an athletic population that is 42 percent female and 58 percent male.

The SIUC Athletic Department is 35 percent female and 65 percent male.

"Within 5 percent is considered safe," West said. "For SIUC, 38 percent is safe harbor. SIUC's goal is 40 percent, and the school is at 35 percent. This is the most critical area."

There are several ways for the
